BOOK A DRUNK SANTA

What better way to entertain your colleagues and get them into the festive spirit than by inviting Santa?!

Unfortunately Santa has had one too many glasses of milk and he's feeling a bit worse for wear...! Why not ask Santa to come prepared with a special poem to read about your company or run a competition and get Santa to give out the prizes? Alternatively you can simply arrange for him to embarrass your CEO...

If you are having a large party, you could also invite along some naughty elves to help entertain all the guests and keep Santa in check.

GET IN THE FESTIVE SPIRIT

Add some Christmas cheer to the party with some unusual festive cocktails (and mocktails). Give me a spiced apple and ginger cocktail over a warm glass of Pinot Grigio any day!

A good cocktail mixologist is a great investment. You could book them to come to your venue and create special cocktails named after your company or better still you could host some classes to teach everyone how to make their own cocktails. It's a really good way to get everyone interacting at the beginning of the party!

Photo booths are a great ice breaker particularly at the beginning of the evening. Our fun photo booth operators love nothing more than encouraging you and your colleagues to get in the booth for a funny group photo!

Get some really hilarious photos of the evening and make sure everyone remembers when Karen from Accounts snogged Marketing Mike under the mistletoe. And you'll have a hilarious gallery of photos to look through the next day to get you through your hangover!

ADD SOME SPARKLE

You might not be able to convince everyone to wear their Christmas jumper but everyone LOVES glitter. From meticulously applied gem stones to full on glitter beards...a glitter station will make everyone happy.

All you need is lots of pots of glitter in different sizes and shapes and plenty of glue or vaseline. You can even get neon glitter now which looks incredible under black light. If you want to go all out you could book professional face paint and glitter extroadinaires - The Glitterbox - who will make sure you and your colleagues look amazing!

GO UNTRADITIONAL

Tired of the same old Christmas songs and tired tinsel? Then why not try mixing it up by going for a completely different theme.

If the bleak Christmas weather is getting you down, why not bring back the summer vibes with a Beach Party theme? All the guests can get out their best Hawaiian shirts and you can give them all flower garlands, flip flops and cocktails with little umbrellas in.

You could even have a limbo competition to get everyone in the mood. I am sure you can have a break from Mariah for one night and listen to the Beach Boys...
